NCAA Guidelines and the Media

Media members should be aware of several NCAA rules that apply to student-athletes. If there is ever a question if any media-related activity or event including a Washington student-athlete could be a possible NCAA violation, contact sports information director Jim Daves for an interpretation. Areas of concern include:

- Coaches and University officials cannot make comments on prospective student-athletes until they sign a national letter of intent. A coach cannot comment on a prospective student-athlete who verbally commits to an institution.
- Coaches and athletic staff are not permitted to write guest columns for publications.
- Do not ask student-athletes to list or endorse products.
- Photographers cannot provide student-athletes with photographs or slides. The media relations office offers a similar service for student-athletes to purchase photographs.
- Student-athletes may not be used in advertisements or endorsements of products, including media-related publications.
- Student-athletes are not permitted to conduct interviews for 1-900 services.

Huskies Return Home to Renovated “Dawghouse”

The Washington men’s basketball team has played the last three seasons in the “Dawghouse.”

After playing off campus in 1999-2000 for the first full season ever, the Huskies returned to more familiar surroundings in 2000-01. Originally completed in 1927, the arena underwent a $40 million, 19-month renovation between March of 1999 and November of 2000 to reconfigure its interior.

The pavilion’s name was also renovated. The building is now called Bank of America Arena at Hec Edmundson Pavilion thanks to a $9.1 million gift from Bank of America for naming rights and a 10-year corporate partnership.

Despite a seating capacity increase from 7,900 to approximately 10,000, the arena is much more intimate than before.

Gone are the infamous roof support pillars that obstructed views of the court. They were replaced by a pair of “super-trusses” that run the length of the building from east to west. Each supertruss is 245-feet long, 30-inches in diameter and weighs 460,000 pounds.

The Pavilion’s east end was converted into a practice court for basketball and volleyball.

Adorning the west end of the Arena is the Founders Club and a new Hall of Fame room that proudly displays Washington’s outstanding athletic tradition. The expanded area offers much more public access to displays, trophies and historical information in addition to serving as a pregame and post-game reception area.

While the renovation of the main arena is stunning, the improvements to the support areas will greatly benefit Washington’s overall program. They have dramatically increased the space of the sports medicine center facilities, equipment rooms, meeting rooms, media accommodations and locker rooms for many of the UW’s teams, including football and men’s and women’s basketball.

The renovation design of Hec Edmundson Pavilion started in the summer of 1997. Construction began in March of 1999 and was completed in November of 2000.

During construction, the men’s and women’s basketball, volleyball and gymnastics teams each competed in alternate venues. The men’s basketball team played its home games at KeyArena in downtown Seattle.

Edmundson Pavilion is a monument to durability. The massive brick structure, with its signature Husky gargoyles on the west facade, is in its ninth decade of service. The Washington men’s basketball team is competing in the building for the 77th season, a stretch that has allowed the UW men’s team to compile more wins in the building (765) than any other team in the nation has won in its current arena.

The Huskies hope to parlay their return to campus into a return to their winning ways. In its final four seasons before the renovation, Washington registered four straight 12-win seasons and a 48-9 record at home.

The Arena renovation is just one of many improvements to the Washington athletic complex as part of the Campaign for the Student Athlete. The $70 million campaign’s goal is to ensure national competitiveness for each of the program’s 23 sports. The Campaign also helped build an indoor practice facility and plans are in the works to renovate the Conibear Crewhouse and complete stadiums for the recently constructed baseball and soccer fields.
