Huskies Look to Get Back into Pac-10 Race With Explosive Offense and Veteran Defense

Considered one of the favorites to contend for the 2003 Pac-10 championship, the Washington football team will attempt to meet those expectations with 14 returning starters and 46 lettermen as the foundation for the team.

The Huskies will feature a pair of the top players in the nation in quarterback Cody Pickett and wide receiver Reggie Williams. That duo, combined with the majority of the offensive line, wide receiver Charles Frederick and tailback Rich Alexis, could make the Huskies hard to stop on offense. Improving the running game to balance out the attack will be the chief area of improvement for the offense.

The Husky defense, while lacking a marquee star, features seven returning starters. Headlining that group is senior linebacker Marquis Cooper, who led the team in tackles last season. The Huskies were among the nation's top teams against the run last year and should be considerably better in the secondary with the return of Roc Alexander at cornerback and a healthy Jimmy Newell at safety.

The Huskies face a tremendous challenge to start the 2003 season when they travel to face defending national champion Ohio State for a nationally televised game. The Buckeyes could certainly serve as an example to the Huskies of what type of improvement a team can make in a single year. After going 7-6 in 2001, Ohio State posted a perfect 13-0 mark last year. Coming off their own 7-6 season that included a 34-24 loss to Purdue in the Sun Bowl, the Huskies have their sights set on a similar turnaround.

Offense

The Huskies would like to strike a better balance between running and passing the ball during the 2003 season. Last year, Washington broke various school passing standards when they threw the ball 621 times during the season. Only Texas Tech (770) and Hawaii (731) threw the ball more, both playing 14-game seasons.

While the passing game was stellar, the rushing game produced just 74.5 yards per game. An emphasis on improved line play and a couple of talented redshirt freshmen at tailback could help add more productivity to the ground attack.

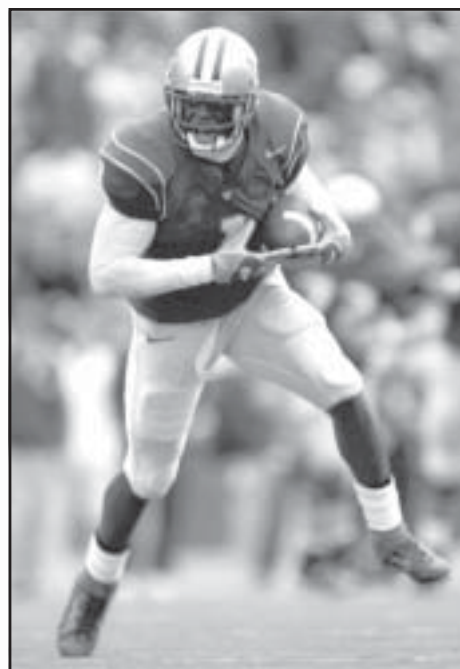

Quarterback

The old adage in the Pac-10 is that it takes a senior quarterback to lead a team to the Rose Bowl. That has been the case for nine of the last 11 teams to win the conference championship. Washington is fortunate to have veteran signalcaller Cody Pickett in that role.

The fifth-year senior will be a top preseason candidate for both the Davey O'Brien Award and the Johnny Unitas Golden Arm Award, which are presented to the nation's top quarterback. He's also considered one of the top players to watch for the Heisman Trophy. While Washington's more balanced approach may mean that Pickett will not duplicate the record number of passing feats he accomplished last season, his ability to lead the Huskies to victories could mean much more in terms of individual awards.

Pickett took full advantage of Washington's game plan to throw the ball in 2002. He passed for more yards than any player in Pac-10 history, including USC quarterback Carson Palmer, the Heisman Trophy winner. In the expanded 12-game season, Pickett threw for 4,458 yards, becoming the first

Wide Receiver Reggie Williams

Quarterback Cody Pickett

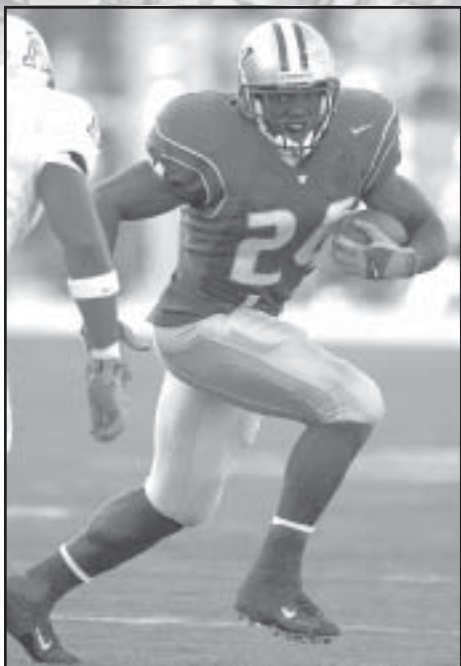

Pac-10 signalcaller to pass for more than 4,000 yards in a season. He also benefited by the NCAA's decision to count postseason results in season statistics for the first time.

As it turned out, Pickett did not need the extra games to eclipse the existing Pac-10 passing record set by Washington State's Ryan Leaf in 1997. He blew by Leaf's mark of 3,637 yards during the 11th game of the season.

Pickett finished the year ranked second nationally with 28.08 completions per game and was third in total offense at 328.7 yards per game. He is the leading returning player for the 2003 campaign in both categories. Only Hawaii's Timmy Chang returns with more total passing yards (4,474) than Pickett (4,458), but he racked up his impressive total in 14 games, one more than his Husky counterpart.

Already a four-time letterwinner, having been granted a medical redshirt for the 1999 season in which played in just one game, Pickett enters his final season at UW with 6,783 career passing yards. He needs to average 261 yards per game as a senior to join the exclusive 10,000-yard passing club.

An extremely competitive athlete, Pickett

has demonstrated that he has a vast array of passes in his repertoire. He can throw the deep ball — he has six pass completions of more than 70 yards in his career — and has the touch to lead running backs as they run screen patterns. Pickett's size and speed gives him great mobility in the pocket and he has been called on to run the option in the past. With 26 game appearances and 23 career starts, he has the game savvy and leadership to guide a veteran offense that includes 26 letterwinners.

Pickett impressed Husky fans during his sophomore campaign when he suffered a painful shoulder separation at midseason. He only allowed the injury to keep him out of one game before returning to his starting role, where he promptly set the school single-game passing record with 455 yards against Arizona.

Aside from Pickett, there are no other quarterbacks on the roster that have played in a game. Sophomore Casey Paus and redshirt freshman Isaiah Stanback will battle for the backup spot. The duo gives the Husky coaches some variety at the position.

The 6-foot-5 Paus is more of a classic dropback thrower while Stanback could be used as a conventional passer or an option quarterback. Stanback is considered an outstanding athlete who presents Washington with the ability to run the option.

Running Back

The Huskies return two veterans at tailback and will look to a pair of redshirt freshmen to improve the productivity of the position. Senior Rich Alexis, the most veteran player at the position, missed spring drills while recuperating from off-season shoulder surgery.

Alexis has appeared in 35 games, including eight starts last season. He has rushed for 1,805 yards and 24 touchdowns during his career. Alexis has also proven to be an effective pass receiver. Twenty-seven of his 44 career receptions came last year, including seven catches in a game against Wyoming.

Junior Chris Singleton was third on the team in rushing in 2002 with 224 yards on 64 carries. His top outing came against UCLA when he rushed 20 times for 92 yards. Singleton started against the Bruins and Oregon State and has carried the ball a total of 78 times during his career.

Two highly-touted redshirt freshmen, Kenny James and Shelton Sampson, bring additional speed to the position. James was regarded as one of the top prep running backs coming out of the high school ranks in 2001, having rushed for 2,900 yards and 49 touchdowns during his senior year. He missed most of spring practice due to a sprained knee.

Sampson won three-consecutive state 110-meter high-hurdle titles as a standout prep athlete. During the winter he competed for the Husky track team and ran a NCAA indoor qualifying time in the 200 meters.

The Huskies return all of their fullbacks from last season. Heading that group is junior Zach

Wide receiver Charles Frederick

Tuiasosopo, who moved to offense last spring after starting his career at outside linebacker. He carried the ball 15 times last season, the only player at the position to run the ball.

Also returning to the position are sophomore Ty Eriks and senior Adam Seery. Like Tuiasosopo, Eriks started at UW as an outside linebacker. Seery moved into the position last year after playing quarterback and safety earlier in his career.

Wide Receiver

While the ranks are lacking the large number of returning veteran players from a year ago, the Husky wide receivers could be one of the top groups in the country thanks to returning first-team All-American Reggie Williams and rapidly-developing junior Charles Frederick.

Washington lost four receivers who totaled 121 receptions last year. Add departed tight end Kevin Ware and that total grows to 163 catches. Williams and Frederick combined for 139 receptions.

Williams, who in two years has established himself as the top wideout in Washington history, will be a leading candidate for the 2003 Biletnikoff Award, presented to the nation's top receiver. He caught 94 passes for 1,454 yards as a sophomore and enters his junior season with 149 career catches good for 2,427 yards. His two-year yardage total is the best ever among Pac-10 receivers. By comparison, USC standout Keyshawn Johnson totaled 148 catches and 2,358 yards in the 1994 and 1995 seasons, his junior and senior seasons.

In 2002, Williams ranked eighth nationally with an average of 7.23 receptions per game and was ninth in reception yards per game at 111.85. His highlights included a school-record 89-yard touchdown catch against San Jose State, a last-minute 80-yard game-winning TD reception against Arizona and a 14-catch, 198-yard, three-touchdown performance on the road at Oregon.

Offensive tackle Todd Bachert

Center Dan Dicks

Williams was at his best down the stretch, helping the Huskies play themselves back into the bowl picture. Dubbed "Mr. November," Williams caught 35 passes during Washington's final three regular season games. That included a 12-reception, 169-yard performance at Washington State while being defended by Cougar All-America cornerback Marcus Trufant.

A strong, physical player, Williams has drawn raves by the Husky coaches for his often overlooked blocking skills. He joined the ranks of the Husky track team during the winter quarter to work on his speed and anchored the team's 4x400-meter relay squad this spring.

While Williams was grabbing most of the headlines last season, the development of Frederick as another reliable receiver was equally important to the Huskies' offensive plans. While he only started twice, Frederick caught 45 passes for 651 yards, and also acted as UW's top punt and kickoff returner last year.

Frederick's speed and elusiveness makes him a dangerous player in the open field. He had at least two catches in every game after spending his freshman year concentrating on special teams duties.

That maturation began during the Huskies' off-season workout program when Frederick elected not to return to the UW basketball team and instead concentrate on football conditioning.

Justin Robbins, who caught 22 catches as a freshman in 2000, will rejoin the team this fall after missing most of the last two years due to injury. Also fitting into the position lineup is redshirt freshman Jordan Slye, who moved from defensive back during the spring, and walkon Matt Griffith. Several incoming freshmen are also expected to compete for playing time at the position.

Tight End

Washington has developed a reputation as the best school in the country for tight ends since the early '90s, though who will be the next player to step into that spotlight is unclear. While sophomore Joe Toledo received a generous amount of playing time in 2002, it was primarily in two tight end sets. Toledo sat out the spring due to shoulder surgery.

Washington took the step of recruiting Jon Lyon, a top junior-college tight end, to stabilize the position. Lyon enrolled at the University in January and participated in spring practices. Redshirt freshman Ben Bandel also impressed the coaches during the spring and Dash Crutchley moved from the defensive line to the position to provide more depth. Sophomore Andy Heater also returns after playing in three games in 2002.

Offensive Line

The Huskies return 10 lettermen and three starters on the offensive line.

The list of starters includes tackle Khalif Barnes, center Todd Bachert and tackle Nick Newton, all be third-year starters.

Last year, the group provided security while Pickett was attempting a record 612 pass attempts. The Huskies surrendered just 37 sacks during the season, one for every 17.5 times the team tried to throw the ball. Run-blocking, however, was more problematic. The Huskies averaged just 74.5 yards per game, ranking ninth in the Pac-10.

Defensive tackle Terry Johnson

With Bachert, a Rimington Trophy candidate in 2003, out of spring drills, the coaching staff gave junior Dan Dicks the opportunity to play center. Dicks was so impressive that Bachert will probably move back to tackle in 2003, the position he played two years ago. Rob Meadow is a likely candidate to move into a starting role at guard, while Brad Vanneman, Robin Kezirian and senior walkon Mike Thompson give the center position excellent depth.

Behind Meadow at strongside guard will be Clay Walker and Jason Simonson. Tusi Sa'au is the likely backup to Newton at the other guard spot.

Defense

Washington will build its defense around eight returning starters and 22 returning lettermen. The Huskies will look to replace departed starters Jafar Williams at outside linebacker, Kai Ellis at defensive end and Ben Mahdavi at inside linebacker. Those three ranked among the top-six tacklers on the 2002 team. Mahdavi, a three-year starter, tied for the team lead with 100 tackles.

Like the other Pac-10 schools, the Huskies could benefit by the fact that so many talented senior quarterbacks graduated from conference schools last year. Washington's secondary, which has been riddled by injuries the past two seasons, returns 11 players who have earned at least one letter.

The Husky defense ranked 11th nationally against the run, allowing just 97.7 yards per game. That was the best total since the 1991 National Championship season and the fifth-best total since the 1964 season. During the final five games of the regular season the Husky secondary allowed just 210 passing yards per game and totaled nine interceptions, while allowing only six touchdowns.

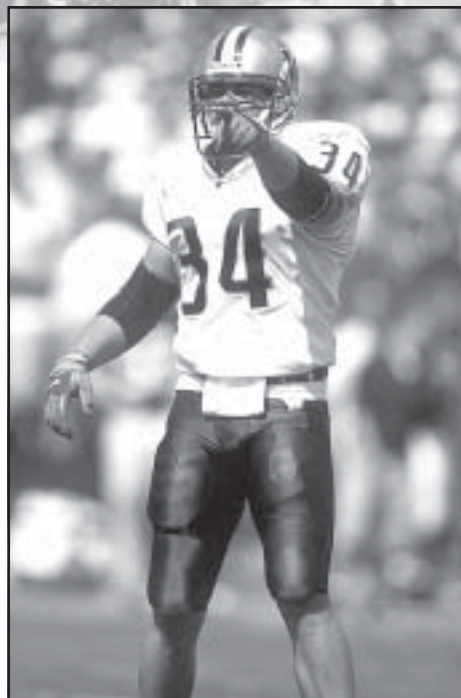

Defensive Line

Three key starters on the Husky defensive line return in 2003. That group includes senior defensive tackle Terry Johnson, junior defensive tackle Josh Miller and junior defensive end Manase Hopoi. Senior tackle Jerome Stevens, a key reserve, is also back as well as a cast of reserve players who have all seen valuable playing time. Miller was forced to sit out spring ball due to a back injury.

Johnson, a first-time starter in 2002, sacked opponent quarterbacks five times, while Hopoi earned seven sacks and 17 tackles-for-loss. Miller, who started every game in 2002, had 33 total tackles, including seven for lost yards.

Juniors Tui Alailefaleula and Junior Coffin both return as backups at tackle with two years of playing experience behind them.

Several younger players will join one junior-college transfer in competing for their first playing time.

The Huskies have a litter of young players seeking their first game action this year. Redshirt freshmen Dan Milsten, Stanley Daniels, Brandon Ala, Donny Mateaki and true freshman Jordan Reffett will all be in the mix up front, while junior-college transfer Mike Mapu teams with sophomore Graham Lasee to provide depth at tackle.

Linebacker

To help compensate for the loss of two key linebackers, the Huskies integrated a little bit of new and old in to the position. The new is Notre Dame transfer Cory Jones, who will compete for one the inside positions. The old is senior Greg Carothers, who moves into the SAM outside linebacker role after starting at safety the past two years. The move is not completely new territory for Carothers, who played the role during the Huskies' nickel package in the past.

Heading up the returning linebacking corps is senior Marquis Cooper. He tied Mahdavi last year for the team lead in total tackles with 100 after moving from an outside to inside position. Two veteran reserves expected to join him at the other inside linebacker position are juniors Tim Galloway and Joe Lobendahn. Galloway, who missed spring drills due to shoulder surgery, had 26 tackles while playing in all 13 games last year. Lobendahn started twice last year, played in all 13 games and totaled 23 tackles. Redshirt freshman Scott White was impressive during the spring and finished the period as Cooper's backup.

Senior Tyler Krambrink is back at the outside linebacker spot after playing in nine games last season.

Defensive Backfield

Washington has 11 letterwinners returning to its four positions in the defensive backfield. Included in that group are eight players who started at some point last season. The only players not to return from last year's unit are Carothers, who will switch to outside linebacker, and Nate Robinson, who gave up football this spring after leading the Husky basketball team in scoring in 2002-03. Robinson started the final six games in 2002 and proved to be outstanding in coverage, with two interceptions and six pass breakups to go with 34 tackles.

Safety Evan Benjamin

Helping to replace Robinson will be senior Roc Alexander, a star in 2000 who missed seven games last season due to a shoulder injury. The speedy Alexander and junior Derrick Johnson give the Huskies two solid veterans at cornerback. Alexander has broken up 15 passes during his career, and has accounted for four interceptions.

Johnson made a successful return to the defense last year after missing the entire 2001 season with a significant foot injury. He started all 13 games and came on strong late in the year, earning back-to-back Pac-10 defensive player of the week honor, for his play against Oregon State and Oregon. Johnson led the cornerbacks with 56 tackles and was first on the team with five interceptions and 10 pass breakups.

Chris Massey, a veteran of 35 games, figures strongly into the mix at cornerback. He has 67 career tackles to go with 10 pass breakups and three interceptions. Redshirt freshman Matt Fountaine will make his debut at cornerback this fall, competing with junior Sam Cunningham and classmate Kim Taylor for playing time.

Having battled through several injuries, junior Jimmy Newell gives the Huskies a solid player at free safety. He accounted for 35 tackles before a sprained ankle kept him out of the final two regular-season contests. James Sims will push for playing time after starting five times last year when Newell out of the lineup. Freshman B.J. Newberry, who plays primarily on special teams, is also drawing more notice at the position.

Evan Benjamin and Owen Biddle give the Huskies several good options at strong safety. Benjamin started three times last year at safety while playing in all 13 games. He accounted for 46 tackles, and is the fourth-leading returning tackler from last year's squad. Biddle, who started the last three games of 2003 at free safety, has appeared in 33 games during his Husky career.

Special Teams

Washington loses both kickers and deep snappers from 2002, but returns all of its top kick return specialists. Another player the Huskies will be hard-pressed to replace is Wilbur Hooks, an excellent punt coverage specialist.

Gone from last year's team are four-year placekicker John Anderson and punter Derek McLaughlin, the team's primary punter the past two seasons. McLaughlin left for a two-year church sponsored mission following the Huskies' appearance in the Sun Bowl.

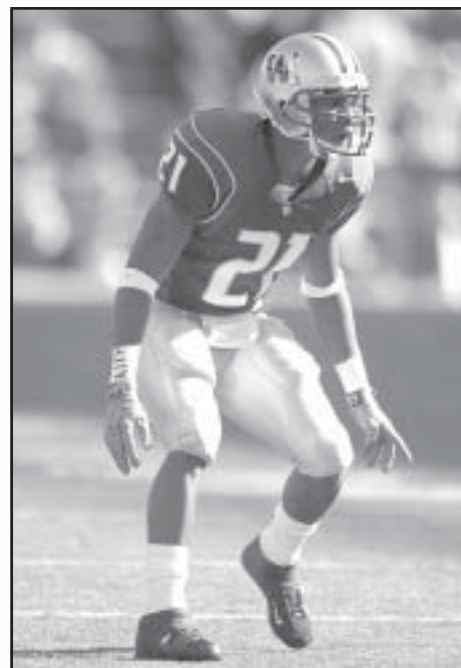

Anderson finished his career as one of the most successful kickers in UW history. He booted 61 field goals during his tenure, the second most by a Husky, while his 331 career points also ranks second all-time among UW players. McLaughlin averaged 38.5 yards per punt as a sophomore after posting a 41.2 yard average as a freshman.

To fill those positions, the Huskies recruited a pair of scholarship kickers. Michael Braunstein, a place kicker from Gilbert, Ariz.; and Sean Douglas, a punter from Bellevue, Neb. The two will compete for the kicking jobs during fall camp.

Walk-on placekickers Evan Knudson and

Cornerback Derrick Johnson

Ricardo DoValle, and punter Isaak Woldeit were the Huskies' top-performing kickers this spring, and will challenge the freshmen.

While the Husky special teams will see new faces in the kicking game, the return team boasts a solid inventory of veteran players.

Frederick returns as Washington's principal kick returner from last season. He was the only player to return a punt for the Huskies last season, averaging 8.1 yards per return on 18 attempts last season. He also had 13 punt returns as a freshman, averaging 14.6 yards per runback. Frederick accounted for a school-record 30 of Washington's 39 kickoff returns in 2002, averaging an even 20 yards per return; up from the 16.5 average he had on 13 runbacks in 2001.

Alexander and Derrick Johnson are other players who have returned kicks for the Huskies. Johnson returned a combined 36 kicks as a freshman season in 2000, and ranked 21st nationally with a 24.2-yard kickoff return average that season.

The speedy Alexander led the Pac-10 in kickoff returns and finished sixth nationally in 2001 with a 29.2-yard average. He recorded three of the top-10 kickoff returns in UW history that season, highlighted by a 95-yard runback for a touchdown against Idaho.

Both of Washington's' deep snappers, Ben Mahdavi (long) and Elliott Zajac (short) graduated. An injury prevented Zajac from snapping for half of the 2002 schedule, allowing Tim Galloway to gain valuable experience. Jason Benn, a redshirt freshman, is considered another skilled candidate to fill the deep-snapping void.

The Schedule

In addition to its eight-game Pac-10 schedule, the Huskies will host Indiana, Idaho and Nevada in non-conference games at Husky Stadium, and will travel to Ohio State on Aug. 30. The Pac-10 schedule includes home dates with Stanford, USC, Oregon and Washington State, and road contests at Oregon State, UCLA, Arizona and California. Under the Pac-10 scheduling formula, Washington will not face Arizona State this season.
